Josh Thames is a Licensed Professional Counselor in Georgia who works closely with teens, families, and couples. Before becoming a counselor, he spent 14 years as a high school teacher and coach, teaching History and Government and coaching varsity baseball and basketball. It was during those years that Josh developed a joy for helping kids and families navigate hard conversations and challenging seasons.

He holds a degree in History from Abilene Christian University, a Master's in Education from Lipscomb University, and a Master's in Clinical Mental Health Counseling from Mercer University.

Josh and his wife, Kaitlyn, are the proud parents of 10-year-old Jonas, who was adopted through Agape Nashville. As a family they love playing baseball, laughing together, and sharing the funniest stories.

Georgia Agape, Inc. is a licensed child-placing agency serving abused, neglected and dependent children through our foster care and adoption programs.
